"Romeo, is that you?"
By Lacey Korevec

Though their lives ended at an early age, Shakespeare’s characters Romeo and Juliet have lived on in a variety of forms throughout the ages. It’s no wonder the Alumni Theater is currently putting on a production of Shakespeare’s classic play, Romeo and Juliet, which starts at 8 p.m. tonight in the Yvonne Theater. The show is one of many others that Rider University is staging for the 2004-05 fall season, which begins this month.

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about."

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.

By Lacey Korevec

"There are a lot of secrets in this story," said Lacey Korevec, a senior English education major who works as a writing assistant in the Writing Center. "It’s the story that everyone read before. Alpha Psi Omega is currently in the midst of creating its annual production, which is going to be set in a futuristic society. It's going to be a statement on her part. It's not something that some of the actors know about.

The show opens with a scene in the Yvonne Theater on Friday, October 22, 2004.