The arrows were the product of information provided by witnesses and tips from informants, according to Edgar.

The task force was looking for Reid in Brooklyn at approximately 3 a.m. when they discovered he was at a relative’s house in the Poconos, according to task force officials.

“Come to the aid of the students,” Daniello Williams, a computer information systems major, and Nicketa Douglas, a communications major, were arrested in connection with the shooting at Rider on Friday, Oct. 17.

At that time police only had the first name of the shooter and knew that he was from New York, according to Edgar.

Williams and Douglas were roommates in room B105 of Gee Residence Hall. Williams has been charged with weapons in the dorms. I know what they might do,” said Edgar.

“The pre-party planning was very well done. There were six administrators there, five security officers and other graduate assistants providing supervision. We also had LPD doing a sweep of the campus that night.” —Dean Anthony Campbell

Equitable responses.

“Our president has really set a new tone,” she said. “This is a model we will use in the future.”

Lorjiste said there have been times when IGC has been held responsible for disturbances at its events, but he could understand why other Greek groups feel this way.

“They are upset because they are afraid that they will get backlash because it did happen at a Greek event and we are all Greeks,” he said.

Rozanski reassured the audience that proper measures are being taken to ensure the safety of the campus.

“We are reviewing security, but not just because of this incident,” he said. “This has been an ongoing effort. We are looking at other schools to see what they are doing and we are cooperating with other schools.”

But Rozanski still stressed the importance of students coming forward with any information.

“We will not tolerate any threat of violence or any threat to the safety and welfare of our community,” he said. “I’ve heard rumors of people with weapons in the dorms. I know there is a culture of don’t ask, don’t tell, but we are talking about peoples’ lives.”

Dean of Students Anthony Campbell said that sometimes security just isn’t enough.

“If we know there is a dangerous situation we must report that,” he said. “We can have 1,000 security officers, but it doesn’t take away from the responsibility of all of us.”

Senior Class President Samantha Gordon agreed.

“We know who we are bringing on campus, and we know what they might do,” she said. “It is up to us to think about these things. To some extent we could have prevented this.”

One student had a suggestion that he felt would improve the safety of the campus.

“Security should be visible at the front gate,” said Kelvin Olive. “They are there at the back of the campus, but they should be in the front of the campus too.”

Rozanski said it is this branch of feedback that he wants from the students. SGA will be collecting suggestions from students over the next couple of weeks and plan to submit a formal document to Rozanski, according to SGA President Ryan Kimball.
