match of the evening except for the heavyweight class, which was forfeited by the Broncos. The final score was 41-6.

“Right now the team is working hard, motivated and ready to do its best for that match,” said Taylor.

The team is looking for theCreston’s victory in the 1,650-freestyle (17:17.19). Freshman Stephanie Urbanski, Clark and fellow sophomore Courtney Clark won the 400-freestyle relay team. They also had a score of 260.05.

The Rider swimming and diving team capped off the season with second place finishes, and the team also took first place with a time of 3:04.94. Engle, one of Rider’s most established swimmers, finished his final MAAC Championship by setting a new MAAC record in the 200-back (1:48.38).

“We did the best with what we had,” said McFerin.

Not to be outdone, the women’s squad finished strong at Loyola as well. Sophomore Lauren Ursbaksi won the 200-butterfly (2:05.95) and fellow sophomore Courtney Clark won the 100-breast (1:17.19). Freshman Stephanie Cosentino placed second in the 100-free (53.68) and the 400-free relay team Ursbaksi, Clark and Cosentino came in second with a time of 3:35.06.

“Coach Fletcher had nothing but good things to say about our performance,” said McFerin. “We went out and swam our fastest and dived our best.”

The Rider men’s swimming and diving team finished 60 points behind Marist. Their men’s team has won the MAAC titles in the last 11 years. The final point total was Marist (852) over Rider (792).

As the saying goes, to get something, you have to lose something. Unfortunately, as women’s sports continue to thrive, there is a major percentage of men across the country losing their own privileges. As the saying goes, to get something, you have to lose something. The problem that schools are facing is proportionality. I will make up a school, let’s call it Caputo University. (CSU). If CSU has a student population of 20 percent male, according to Title IX, CSU would have to have an equal amount of men and women. Furthermore, women’s athletic programs continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore, women’s sports continue to thrive, and so do men’s. The problem that Title IX has had is that the law was intended to ensure that women receive equal opportunities to extend their athletic careers through college. Furthermore